

In Other Workshop Business:

- Warren May, project coordinator for Florida Ready to Work, a program implemented in the School District that prepares high school students for careers, spoke to the School Board about the district's achievements for launching Ready to Work's vocational technical training in every high school and technical school in the county.

"There hasn't been another district who has embraced it the way Escambia County has," May said.

The program is funded and sponsored by the state and is administered through the Florida Department of Education.
